Feminist Periodicals

A current listing of contents

Volume 21, Number 1 Spring 2001

Periodical literature is the cutting edge of women's scholarship, feminist theory, and much of women's culture. Feminist Periodicals: A Current Listing of Contents is published by the Office of the University of Wisconsin System Women's Studies Librarian on a quarterly basis with the intent of increasing public awareness of feminist periodicals. It is our hope that Feminist Periodicals will serve several purposes: to keep the reader abreast of current topics in feminist literature; to increase readers' familiarity with a wide spectrum of feminist periodicals; and to provide the requisite bibliographic information should a reader wish to subscribe to a journal or to obtain a particular article at her library or through interlibrary loan. (Users will need to be aware of the limitations of the new copyright law with regard to photocopying of copyrighted materials.)

Table of contents pages from current issues of major feminist journals are reproduced in each issue of Feminist Periodicals, preceded by a comprehensive annotated listing of all journals we have selected. As publication schedules vary enormously, not every periodical will have table of contents pages reproduced in each issue of FP. The annotated listing provides the following information on each journal:

1. Year of first publication.
2. Frequency of publication.
3. U.S. subscription price(s).
4. Subscription address.
5. Current editor.
6. Editorial address (if different from subscription address).
7. International Standard Serials Number (ISSN).
8. OCLC, Inc. Control Number.
9. Locations where the journal is held in the UW System.
10. Publications in which the journal is indexed.
11. Fulltext products in which publication appears or vendor intermediaries who make the full text available.
12. Subject focus/statement of purpose of the journal.

Please note that in the actual text, only the numbers 1 to 12 are used to identify the different categories of information.

Our goal is to have represented in FP all English-language feminist periodicals with a substantial national or regional readership, with an emphasis on scholarly journals and small press offerings. We do not include publications which, though feminist in philosophy, do not focus solely on women's issues. Nor, with few exceptions, do we include newsstand magazines. We are also forced to omit periodicals which lack a complete table of contents. We encourage feminist serials to build a full table of contents into their regular format to facilitate the indexing feminist literature sorely needs.

Interested readers will find more complete information on feminist periodicals in DWM: A Directory of Women's Media published by the National Council for Research on Women (530 Broadway at Spring Street, New York, NY 10012); and in Women's Periodicals and Newspapers: A Union List of the Holdings of Madison Area Libraries, edited by James P. Danky, compiled by Maureen E. Hady, Barry Christopher, and Neill E. Strache (Boston: G.K. Hall, 1982).

Suggestions for improvements of Feminist Periodicals are gratefully received. We would particularly appreciate assistance from readers in the UW-System with our efforts to keep the holding information complete and up to date. Please let us know about new subscriptions, subscriptions we have overlooked, cancellations, or other pertinent information. Feminist Periodicals is also available on microfilm at the library of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin.

12. "The Berkeley Women's Law Journal is guided by an editorial policy that distinguishes us from other law reviews and feminist periodicals. Our mandate is to publish research, analysis, narrative, theory, and commentary that address the lives and struggles of underrepresented women. We believe that excellence in feminist legal scholarship requires critical examination of the intersection of gender with one or more other axes of subordination, including, but not limited to, race, class, sexual orientation, and disability. Therefore, discussions of women's issues that treat women as a monolithic group do not fall within our mandate. Because conditions in inequality are continually changing, our mandate is also continually changing."

12. "Feminist Studies was founded to encourage analytic responses to feminist issues and to open new areas of research, criticism and speculation. The editors are committed to providing a forum for feminist analysis, debate, and exchange. The feminist movement has demonstrated that the study of women is more than a compensatory project. Instead, feminism has the potential fundamentally to reshape the way we view the world. We wish not just to interpret women's experiences but to change women's condition. For us, feminist thought represents a transformation of consciousness, social forms, and modes of action."

 12. "Gender & Society focuses on the social and structural study of gender as a basic principle of the social order and as a primary social category. Emphasizing theory and research from a micro- and macrostructural perspective, Gender & Society welcomes studies in sociology, social psychology, political science, history, economics, and anthropology that are framed by a social analysis and a feminist perspective. Gender & Society is committed to an evaluation policy that does not preclude any of the feminist perspectives."

 12. "The aim of Gender, Place & Culture is to provide the focal point for recent work concerned with gender issues in geography and related disciplines. Key concerns in this area include the following: geographical variations in gender divisions and structures of patriarchy; the cultural construction and the cultural politics of gender; the intersections between gender, 'race', ethnicity, nationality, sexuality, class, age and other social divisions. The journal will provide a forum for debate in human geography and related disciplines on these themes. By drawing together these contributions, the journal will highlight the relevance of geographical research to feminism and women's studies."

- "Awareness of gender as a central feature of all aspects of everyday life and society has become more and more widespread. Appropriately social sciences research is reflecting this increasing concern with gender, especially in the field of work and organization where this journal is focused. Gender, Work and Organization is the first journal to bring together a wide range of interdisciplinary and multi-disciplinary research in this field into a new international forum for debate and analysis. The journal is dedicated to advancing theory, research and applications concerning gender relations at work, the organization of gender, and the gendering of organizations. Contributions are invited from all disciplinary perspectives, including anthropology, history, labour economics, law, philosophy, politics, psychology and sociology."

12. "AWBR is the only Australian review of women's books. [It] reviews current writing by women, mainly in Australia: fiction, poetry, history, health, sexuality, social and cultural issues, children's and adolescent fiction. AWBR aims to provide women throughout Australia, urban and rural, outside and within the universities, with current information on small-press publications and books which are often seen as of only academic or special interest. Reviews also offer specialist woman-centered and feminist perspectives on books that have attracted more generalist reviews in the mainstream. Feature articles and reviews collect a sense of readings around topics that are attracting discussion and/or influencing women's lives."

The aim of Reproductive Health Matters is "to promote laws, policies, research and services that meet women's reproductive health needs and support women's right to decide whether, when and how to have children.... [its] women-centered perspective... allows us to identify and understand women's reproductive health needs, and therefore evaluate and improve on existing policy and practice to women's benefit.... To this end, the journal explores what is meant by women's needs and how these can best be met. It addresses fundamental values, concerns and dilemmas, acknowledging the multi-faceted nature of problems and solutions. Finally, it reflects on commonalities and differences in goals and points of view among those involved in the field -- in order to foster increased communication and cooperation, new thinking and action, and new forms of consensus."

11. Ingenta, SwetsNetNavigator.
12. "Studies in Gender and Sexuality is a response to the excitement attendant to recent research and writing by scholars and clinicians. It will provide a forum for examining gender and sexuality that is both multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary. As clinicians and scholars who have written and practiced at the intersection of feminist theory and clinical psychoanalysis, the Editors are especially interested in those areas of controversy that invite the divergent perspectives and insights of different disciplines. Early issues of SGS will focus on transgender identities and intersexuality; contemporary readings of the category of perversion; puberty and adolescence revised and revisited; and the intersections among class, race, and gender in theory, culture, and the clinical situation. The primary goal of SGS is to promote dialogue on these and other timely topics among clinicians, researchers, and theorists. Consonant with this goal, the journal will also publish related work from the humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences, where questions involving gender and sexuality are currently in lively debate."

The journal is devoted to descriptive, theoretical, clinical, empirical, and multicultural perspectives on the topic of women and therapy. Women comprise the overwhelming majority of clients in therapy. Yet there has been little emphasis on this area in the training of therapists or in the professional literature. Women & Therapy is designed to fill this void of information."

The Weave of Gender and Culture in the Tapestry of a Family Therapy Training Program: Promoting Social Justice in the Practice of Family Therapy 1

Toni Schindler Zimmerman
Shelley A. Haddock

Family therapy training programs are being challenged to ensure that future generations of family therapists are proficient in addressing gender, culture, and social justice issues in their practice of therapy. To address this challenge, MFT program faculty must fully integrate the organizing principles of gender and culture throughout every aspect of the curricula. This article describes specific ways that the faculty members in a marriage and family therapy training program weave gender and culture throughout the tapestry of a training program. It provides specific, concrete, and transferable strategies, activities, ideas, and resources for integrating gender and culture in family therapy courses, supervision, research, service, and clinical environments.

Therapists' Gender Assumptions and How These Assumptions Influence Therapy 33

Tal Harris
Laurie B. Moret
Jerry Gale
Karen L. Kampmeyer

The purpose of this study is to investigate therapists' construction of gender through an examination of clinicians' attributions of expressiveness and instrumentality. Ninety-nine therapists participated in this study by watching a 25 minute videotaped vignette of a clinician interviewing a Caucasian female-male couple. Half of the participants viewed a female actor performing an expressive role with a male actor performing an instrumental role, while the other half watched a tape where the roles were reversed. After viewing the videotape, the participants completed the Bem Sex Role Inventory for the husband and wife and two one-item measures of power and gender. The results indicated that the sex of the actor organized therapists' construction of expressiveness and instrumentality. For example, when the woman was performing the expressive role, she was rated higher on expressiveness than the man when the man was performing the same role. These findings suggest that the dominant discourse on gender may have infiltrated therapists' empirical assessments of their clients' behavior. The relevance of this study to training is also discussed.

Differences Making a Difference: Cross-Cultural Interactions
in Supervisory Relationships 61

Kyle D. Killian

As the field of family therapy continues to gain exposure both in the U.S. and abroad, family therapists and their supervisors are increasingly likely to come from diverse cultural backgrounds. This study examines how differences in culture of origin influence supervisory relationships. Twelve individual interviews were conducted with six supervisors and six supervisees who had worked with one or more supervisees or supervisors whose culture of origin differed from their own. The descriptive data was analyzed using the method of constant comparison. Results reflect cross-cultural supervisees' acclimation to a Western U.S. training context, specific challenges associated with cross-cultural supervision, and ways in which supervisors can sensitively and effectively supervise culturally different supervisees. Implications for education and training in family therapy are presented.

- Neither Mask nor Mirror: One Therapist's Journey to Ethically Integrate Feminist Family Therapy and Multiculturalism 105
Laura A. Bryan

Feminist family therapy focuses on the gendered context of clients' lives, but has been criticized for mirroring the needs of White, middle-class women only. The multicultural approach to therapy emphasizes respect for diverse cultural values, but is vulnerable to using tradition to mask abuses. Integration of these two perspectives can address these criticisms, but also raises ethical concerns. Therapists need to be aware of these dilemmas as well as suggestions for managing them.

Experiencing Feminist Family Therapy Supervision 171
Anne Prouty

Although feminists have been writing about and practicing feminist family therapy for over twenty years, writing about feminist family therapy supervision has been limited to a few in-depth personal designs and Avis' (1986) Delphi study. This article reports on a portion of the findings of a larger study of feminist supervision. The sixteen participants described their therapist-supervisor relationship to be the heart of their supervision experience, the center point from which the supervision derived meaning. When asked if they thought they focused on anything that they would call feminist, supervisors and therapists described issues that fell into the following areas: gender, power, diversity and emotion. These results are reviewed within the context of the feminist family therapy supervision literature and with suggestions for their use.

Therapy with Families in Poverty: Application of Feminist Family Therapy Principles 205
Scott J. Ziemba

Issues of economic marginalization have been largely neglected in training of family therapists. However, attention to the effects of economic instability on family and individual well-being is important in preparing clinicians to address the needs and goals of families in poverty. This paper has been designed as an attempt to apply principles of feminist family therapy to therapeutic work with low-income families. Specifically, 7 principles commonly included in the practice of feminist family therapy are given special consideration. Practical applications of each principle are discussed for developing a model of class-conscious therapy. It is argued that feminist family therapy can serve as a framework for providing effective and respectful therapy to families in poverty.

Hinemoa: Retelling a Famous Romance 1
Ngahuia Te Awakotuku

This is a retelling of the famous Maori legend, the romance of Hinemoa and Tutanekei. In this version, with an introductory text, the writer challenges the Victorian record, and subverts the contemporary story. She presents an alternate narrative.

Unsettled Women: Deviant Genders in Late Nineteenth-and Early Twentieth-Century New Zealand 13
Jenny Coleman

Amy Bock (alias Percy Redwood) created a media sensation when "The Case of the Woman Bridegroom" hit the newspapers throughout New Zealand in 1909. She was hailed as the "queerest and most interesting character that has ever been before the New Zealand public" and "pitiable in her freakish exploits." Debates ensued as to whether her crimes were evidence of a mania, a disease, or simply due to a flawed, criminal character. This article focuses on media portrayals of women who did not conform to normative constructions of acceptable womanhood within the latter decades of the nineteenth century and the early twentieth century in New Zealand, as a means of tracing the mutable boundaries of intelligible genders. Newspaper debates and emergent discourses around the medicalisation of social deviancy are drawn upon to demonstrate how normative constructions of gender were premised upon a defining matrix of mad/bad/woman.

Frances Mary Hodgkins: Journeys into the Hearts of Women 27
Alison J. Laurie

Frances Hodgkins was one of a number of expatriate New Zealanders during the early twentieth century who lived in Britain or Europe, where it was easier to find supportive friendship circles for their lives as artists or as people attracted to their own sex. In this article, I explore the primacy of women in Hodgkins' life and read this as lesbian and argue that many of these relationships were sexual, from the evidence of her letters which suggest that she moved in lesbian worlds of work and friendship. I also discuss the financial and emotional support given by her male homosexual as well as her lesbian friends who made her life as an artist possible.

New Zealand's Lost Lesbian Writers and Artists 49
Aorewa McLeod

The paper discusses three New Zealand novelists, a poet, and a painter, whose identities as lesbians have been obliterated in the biographies and critical commentaries written on them. It considers whether the small and largely monocultural New Zealand literary and artistic scene made both coming out and being identified as a lesbian more difficult than in Europe or the United States. It concludes that even in the 1990s, "ghosting" the lesbians of the past is still prevalent.

KEYWORDS. New Zealand, lesbian writers, lesbian artists

An Astounding Masquerade 63
Julie Glamuzina

This paper considers the contribution of historical accounts and case studies to the development of lesbian historical knowledge and the amplification of lesbian experience. The author suggests that historical endeavours need to position such accounts and assert lesbian experience so that, increasingly, public space is occupied by lesbian knowledge and lesbian concerns. The paper discusses a 1945 case of a New Zealand woman, known only as Mr. X, who dressed and acted as a man for over ten years, even having her breasts removed. She was criminally charged when legal authorities discovered she had fraudulently married another woman. The pattern of regulatory responses by the dominant hetero-culture is discussed in relation to this case and other similar cases and categorised into three strategies—reinforcement, containment, and leverage.

Lesbian Plays and Their Players 85
Judith Dale

This discussion focuses on various texts for the theatre by women dramatists in Aotearoa/New Zealand. It raises a number of questions initially about lesbian plays and playwrights, and then about the performability of gender. Finally, I consider briefly some theoretical issues to do with textual reading, including post-structural readings of "the lesbian." Much usage of the term "lesbian identity" presupposes that there is such a thing, and that it is fixed, univocal and stable. As my readings of these texts show, however, "the lesbian" constitutes a set of fluid identifications, expressed in heterogeneity and change. In these critical readings I examine dramatic texts generating lesbian identities, in the specific social context of Aotearoa/New Zealand.

Introducing Annamarie Jagose: Writer 105
Toni McCallum

Annamarie Jagose's fiction can be loosely divided into the early short stories and the later novels. The stories are generally feminist and lesbian in content and characters, and contain many traditional story elements. The novels, In Translation and Lulu, are more complex works. In these texts, Jagose is interested in "queering" identity, both heterosexual and homosexual, and in questioning the effectiveness of these traditional taxonomies. Both the stories and novels feature an exquisite control of language, a wry humour, and a deft understanding of human relationships.

Lesbians and Economic/Social Change: Impacts of Globalisation on Our Community(ies) and Politics 115
Prue Hyman

This article discusses the globalisation juggernaut and its impacts on women in general and lesbians in particular. It outlines the inadequacies of the pink dollar glitzy image of lesbians, and considers what lesbian economics involve. This leads to outlining some political implications for our own communities of globalisation and its individualistic world, internally, in coalitions, and in our dealings with governments. It concludes that economics is an important influence on our communities, for good and ill, and that values and politics should be critical to how we handle economic issues. Continuing the creation of lesbian economy and value systems and influencing those of the straight world are ongoing, difficult tasks.

The Great, Late Lesbian and Bisexual Women's Discrimination Survey 133
Jenny Rankine

This 1992 New Zealand survey of discrimination against 261 lesbian and bisexual women found comparable rates of public abuse and workplace discrimination to those reported by surveys in other developed countries. The women reported higher rates of assault in public places than a random sample of New Zealand women. Indigenous Maori women reported higher rates of assault, threats, verbal abuse, and workplace discrimination than the non-Maori women surveyed. Aggression against the women was often in response to public expression of affection for another woman or to rejection of men's public sexual advances. The respondents reported hostile educational environments that coincided with peer harassment of students attracted to their own gender. Around two-thirds of the women had hidden their sexuality on some occasions at work to avoid discrimination. No significant differences between the discrimination experiences of lesbian and bisexual women emerged, although the bisexual sample was too small for statistical analysis.

Lesbian Access to Justice: Toward Lesbian Survival
Under the Rule of Law 143
Elisabeth McDonald

Although some aspects of New Zealand family law have been criticised as discriminatory, the New Zealand legal system has yet to be critically examined from a lesbian perspective. This article begins a development of lesbian legal theory for Aotearoa/New Zealand by analysing the contribution that the 1999 Law Commission study, Women's Access to Legal Services, has made to our knowledge about the impact of the law on lesbian relationships and communities.

KEYWORDS. Lesbian legal theory, law and sexuality, law reform, access to justice, equality, discrimination, lesbian visibility, New Zealand

Dangerous Territories 157
Anthea Karen Raven

This paper considers both social work and the workplace as dangerous territory for lesbians. It is claimed that social work as a professional and occupational role is territorially claimed by hetero-dominant relations and discourses. Because of this, lesbian social workers are endangered within this environment and context. It draws on the experiences of lesbian social workers and examines the trends and themes of discrimination within a theoretical and analytical context that addresses the hetero-dominance of a professional and occupational role. The analysis shows the systematic patterning of discrimination and the psychological impact of social forms of oppression.

KEYWORDS. Lesbian, workplace discrimination, social work, social oppression, New Zealand

The Effects of Coming Out on Relationships and Health 183
Miriam Saphira
Marewa Glover

This study set out to ascertain how open lesbians were about their sexual orientation, using a snowball sample of lesbians in New Zealand. The research looked at how disclosure impacted on lesbian sexual behaviour, self assessed health status, relationships, and use of health services. The questions were part of a large survey modelled on a North Health Study (Parr, Whitaker, and Jackson, 1998) which included the SF-36 survey instrument. A standardized set of questions and calculated scoring were used to measure the self-assessed health of respondents (Ware et al., 1993). The 795 return results were compared with a sample of women from Northern New Zealand and a sample of lesbians from the New Zealand Census. The respondents were coded into three groups according to their degree of openness: those who were out to everybody, those who were out to all but one person of significance, and those who were out to a few. Lesbians who were not open to their doctors were more likely to have reported being closeted to employers and parents, to smoke more, to drink more alcohol, to have less sex, and to earn less money. Respondents who labeled themselves gay reported that they were not so open. Of the 77% that were out to their health professional, 5% had received a negative response.

- That Four Letter Word-Sons: Lesbian Mothers and Adolescent Sons 195
Jill Chrisp

This title for this article has been inspired by pioneer feminist and lesbian mother of a son, Robin Morgan, who wrote, "If few subjects so provoke anxiety among feminists as the four-letter word sons. Yet that subject goes to the crux of power and of patriarchy, even though it grazes the living nerves of love" (Morgan, 1997, p. 38). The article is based on the material gathered from interviews with lesbian mothers who participated in a doctoral research project investigating the mother/adolescent-son relationship.

- Ties That Bind: Recognising the Spiritual 211
Allison M. Kirkman

This paper explores how a group of Pakeha women who self-identify as lesbian, gay, or homosexual set about constructing new ways of being Christian, influenced by feminist world-views and an ethos of self-awareness. This construction meshes with new ways of being religious in modern societies, but it also demonstrates how lesbian women have much in common with other women within Christian churches. This paper, therefore, signals the continuing importance of gender as an intervening structure when exploring the relationship between sexuality and religion, specifically the relationship between being lesbian and being Christian.

REGULAR ARTICLE

- A "Labor from the Heart": Lesbian Magazines from 1947-1994 229
Jan Whitt

While it is true that publications targeted to gay males historically were glossier, had more consistent advertising income, and claimed higher circulations than lesbian periodicals, the number of lesbian newsletters, newspapers, and magazines grew significantly during the nearly 50 years covered in this study.

This study chronicles the origin, growth and disappearance of four significant lesbian publications—Vice Versa, The Ladder, Focus: A Journal for Lesbians, and Sinister Wisdom—from 1947 to 1994. These magazines illustrate varied genre in lesbian publishing history and represent three distinctly different geographical areas. They also span almost five decades during the inauspicious beginning and rapid growth of the lesbian press.

This study argues that lesbian publications, although often tied to politically active organizations, existed primarily to help individual lesbians come to terms with a homophobic world and to provide social connections and essential support systems. Less financially secure than their counterparts in the gay male magazine industry, lesbian publications were labors of love and rarely survived.

4 Letters

7 Kol Ishah NEWS YOU HAVEN'T HEARD BEFORE

Jewish film festivals with a feminist spin • Urgent: how to safeguard our abortion rights • Sex and incontinence • Jewish women in prison • and more

BLACK/JEWISH: Reporting from the intersection of these identities.

13 A Hard Row to Hoe BY MO FLEMING

An African-American woman talks frankly about the joys of becoming Jewish—and about the pain of being insulted by other Jews.

16 Portrayed, or Betrayed? BY CHARLOTTE HONINGMAN-SMITH

Why does Rebecca Walker stereotype Jewish women? Our reviewer has some surprising criticism of Alice Walker's daughter's much-touted autobiography, Black, White and Jewish.

THE BALANCING ACT

18 "I am their Text." BY SOPHIE DANIS OBERFIELD

A Yale senior on the tightrope, teaching teen girls to love Jewish texts and at the same time to challenge how Judaism views women. Plus: TAMARA COHEN on pre-bat mitzvah daughters and RACHEL KRANSON on accepting versus resisting Jewish tradition.

22 Taking Back Our Rites: Lighting Candles, Baking Challah and the Laws of Married Sex BY YISKAH ROSENBERG

A young feminist reclaims women's traditional rituals.

25 Ruth A POEM BY JENNIFER THOMAS26 Fat Talk BY MIMI NICHTER

Lessons for mothers and others from Nichter's new book about teens and dieting. And ... 22 years after Susie Orbach's Fat is a Feminist Issue became an international best seller, BARBARA GINGOLD talks to Orbach in Jerusalem about Jewish women and body image.

30 Thirsting A SHORT STORY BY SUSIE KAUFMAN35 Reviews

Summer reading: sex, dance, theater, short stories with an edge, debut novels and civil rights activism.

45 Creative Edge CRAFTS, GIFTS AND MORE46 Tsena Rena LILITH'S INDISPENSABLE RESOURCE PAGES48 Memorial Day in Tel Aviv BY TALIA CARNERWho was Lilith?

In the Garden of Eden, long before the eating of the apple, the Holy One created the first human beings—a man, Adam, and a woman, Lilith. Lilith said "We are equal because we are created from the same earth."

40 SPECIAL REPORT:

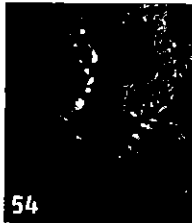

MS. GOES TO COLLEGE

So you want to know what college is like for a feminist? Forget the Princeton Review. Ms. goes to the source, with essays by students about everything from “glomming” to speak-outs and kiss-ins to the challenge of being a radical feminist in the Bible Belt.

54 WHERE IS THE LOVE?

“Because I am a black woman trying to love a black man, my choices are fewer, my chances dimmer.” Maybe what the community needs is a Black Love Day, says the author of this provocative essay.

62 A DAUGHTER OF CAMBODIA REMEMBERS

Loung Ung lost much of her family to the Khmer Rouge, and was trained to be a child soldier. Now she fights to rid the world of land mines. It's one way to banish her demons.

68 POST-ABORTION STRESS SYNDROME

Anti-choicers are pushing the bogus claim that abortions cause debilitating stress. Here's what you need to know about this so-called “woman-centered” campaign.

- Ann Petry's In Darkness and Confusion and the Harlem Riot of 1943: Fictional Insights into the Causes and Nature of Collective Violence 1
Beverly A. Smith

The novella In Darkness and Confusion by Ann Petry (1908-1997) is a fictional portrayal of the causes and nature of the Harlem Riot of 1943. Working as a journalist in New York City during the Second World War, this African-American novelist and short-story writer captured the frustrations and grievances that actual residents of that city felt toward the police, city officials, and the segregated military. This article compares Petry's insights as a journalist and fiction writer with those of historians and sociologists who have studied the 1943 Harlem Riot and the other more destructive, more deadly riots from the 1960s on.

KEYWORDS. Riot, African-American, Harlem, grievance, vandalism, looting, World War II, fiction, Ann Petry

- It's a Family Affair: Incarcerated Women and Their Families 21
Susan F. Sharp
Susan T. Marcus-Mendoza

In the United States, incarceration rates are increasing at an alarming rate. In particular, the incarceration of women is increasing. Oklahoma has the highest rate of female incarceration in the nation, and drug offenders comprise a significant proportion of these female inmates. Placing large numbers of women in prison may have serious implications not only for the women but also for their families, particularly their children. We surveyed 144 incarcerated female drug offenders in Oklahoma, 96 of whom reported dependent children living with them prior to incarceration. The data included the women's perceptions of the effect of their incarceration on their families as well as an examination of the potential for serious problems due to placement of the children. The study indicates that many children are placed with families that have a history of abuse, which suggests that failure to consider the implications of incarcerating large numbers of women likely contributes to serious abuse risks for their children.

KEYWORDS. Female inmates, inmates' children, families of inmates, abuse

- Domestic Violence Victims' Behavior in Favor of Prosecution:
Effects of Gender Relations 51
Hoan N. Bui

This article examines how economic, emotional and social-power related factors affect victims' behavior in favor of prosecution during police investigations. Data drawn from police records and police narrative reports indicated that mutual charge, dual arrest, the severity of assaults and the severity of injuries suffered by victims negatively affected the victims' behavior in favor of prosecution. These findings suggest that the norm of unequal relationships between men and women combined with an indiscriminate use of mutual charge and dual arrest without considering the defensive or offensive nature of violent acts can reduce trust in the criminal justice system among women victims of domestic violence and decrease the victims' interest in pursuing prosecution.

KEYWORDS. Domestic violence, gender relations, police investigation, prosecution, social power

- Women Offenders Who Use and Deal Methamphetamine:
Implications for Mandated Drug Treatment 77
Shiela M. Strauss
Gregory P. Falkin

This article describes the patterns of methamphetamine use among a group of women offenders and their involvement in manufacturing and distributing the drug. All of the women (N = 64) had used methamphetamine frequently for some time during their lives and were recently mandated to a prison- and a community-based drug treatment program in Portland, Oregon. The vast majority of women used methamphetamine regularly during the past year, and most of them had been involved in the production or distribution of the drug. Many of them continued to be involved in dealing methamphetamine over time. Implications for mandated drug treatment are discussed.

KEYWORDS. Methamphetamine, drug dealing, women, offenders, drug treatment
