Feminist Periodicals

A current listing of contents

Volume 21, Number 2, Summer 2001
Published by Phyllis Holman Weisbard
Women's Studies Librarian
Periodical literature is the cutting edge of women's scholarship, feminist theory, and much of women's culture. Feminist Periodicals: A Current Listing of Contents is published by the Office of the University of Wisconsin System Women's Studies Librarian on a quarterly basis with the intent of increasing public awareness of feminist periodicals. It is our hope that Feminist Periodicals will serve several purposes: to keep the reader abreast of current topics in feminist literature; to increase readers' familiarity with a wide spectrum of feminist periodicals; and to provide the requisite bibliographic information should a reader wish to subscribe to a journal or to obtain a particular article at her library or through interlibrary loan. (Users will need to be aware of the limitations of the new copyright law with regard to photocopying of copyrighted materials.)

Table of contents pages from current issues of major feminist journals are reproduced in each issue of Feminist Periodicals, preceded by a comprehensive annotated listing of all journals we have selected. As publication schedules vary enormously, not every periodical will have table of contents pages reproduced in each issue of FP. The annotated listing provides the following information on each journal:

1. Year of first publication.
2. Frequency of publication.
4. Subscription address.
6. Editorial address (if different from subscription address).
8. OCLC, Inc. Control Number.
9. Locations where the journal is held in the UW System.
10. Publications in which the journal is indexed.
11. Fulltext products in which publication appears or vendor intermediaries who make the full text available.
12. Subject focus/statement of purpose of the journal.

Please note that in the actual text, only the numbers 1 to 12 are used to identify the different categories of information.

Our goal is to have represented in FP all English-language feminist periodicals with a substantial national or regional readership, with an emphasis on scholarly journals and small press offerings. We do not include publications which, though feminist in philosophy, do not focus solely on women's issues. Nor, with few exceptions, do we include newsstand magazines. We are also forced to omit periodicals which lack a complete table of contents. We encourage feminist serials to build a full table of contents into their regular format to facilitate the indexing feminist literature sorely needs.
Interested readers will find more complete information on feminist periodicals in DWM: A Directory of Women's Media published by the National Council for Research on Women (530 Broadway at Spring Street, New York, NY 10012); and in Women's Periodicals and Newspapers: A Union List of the Holdings of Madison Area Libraries, edited by James P. Danky, compiled by Maureen E. Hady, Barry Christopher, and Neill E. Strache (Boston: G.K. Hall, 1982).

Suggestions for improvements of Feminist Periodicals are gratefully received. We would particularly appreciate assistance from readers in the UW-System with our efforts to keep the holding information complete and up to date. Please let us know about new subscriptions, subscriptions we have overlooked, cancellations, or other pertinent information. Feminist Periodicals is also available on microfilm at the library of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin.

12. “The Berkeley Women’s Law Journal is guided by an editorial policy that distinguishes us from other law reviews and feminist periodicals. Our mandate is to publish research, analysis, narrative, theory, and commentary that address the lives and struggles of underrepresented women. We believe that excellence in feminist legal scholarship requires critical examination of the intersection of gender with one or more other axes of subordination, including, but not limited to, race, class, sexual orientation, and disability. Therefore, discussions of women’s issues that treat women as a monolithic group do not fall within our mandate. Because conditions in inequality are continually changing, our mandate is also continually changing.”

12. "The Columbia Journal of Gender and Law was founded to publish legal and interdisciplinary writings on feminism and gender issues and to expand feminist jurisprudence. Both national and international in focus, the Journal is intended to serve as a forum for topics inadequately addressed in most law journals and reviews, including issues concerning women, children, family, sexuality, reproductive rights, and violence. The articles in JGL approach legal issues from a variety of disciplines. We aim to promote an expansive view of feminism embracing women and men of all colors, classes, sexual orientations, and cultures."

12. Feminist Studies was founded to encourage analytic responses to feminist issues and to open new areas of research, criticism and speculation. The editors are committed to providing a forum for feminist analysis, debate, and exchange. The feminist movement has demonstrated that the study of women is more than a compensatory project. Instead, feminism has the potential fundamentally to reshape the way we view the world. We wish not just to interpret women’s experiences but to change research methodologies, and approaches to day-to-day classroom interactions.

12. "The aim of Gender, Place & Culture is to provide the focal point for recent work concerned with gender issues in geography and related disciplines. Key concerns in this area include the following: geographical variations in gender divisions and structures of patriarchy; the cultural construction and the cultural politics of gender; the intersections between gender, 'race', ethnicity, nationality, sexuality, class, age and other social divisions. The journal will provide a forum for debate in human geography and related disciplines on these themes. By drawing together these contributions, the journal will highlight the relevance of geographical research to feminism and women's studies."

Appropriately social sciences research is reflecting this increasing concern with gender, especially in the field of work and organization where this journal is focused. Gender, Work and Organization is the first journal to bring together a wide range of interdisciplinary and multi-disciplinary research in this field into a new international forum for debate and analysis. The journal is dedicated to advancing theory, research and applications concerning gender relations at work, the organization of gender, and the gendering of organizations. Contributions are invited from all disciplinary perspectives, including anthropology, history, labour economics, law, philosophy, political, psychology and sociology."

We seek not only to describe women's experiences but to interpret them within their socio-political context in order to understand how women's condition has been and can be changed... Phoebe is particularly committed to publishing work informed by a theoretical perspective which will enrich critical thinking in various areas. Work that examines the intersection of race, class and gender or focuses on racial, sexual or ethnic minorities is especially welcome."

7. ISSN 1524-0857.
8. OCLC 28959388.
9. "Studies in Gender and Sexuality is a response to the excitement attendant to recent research and writing by scholars and clinicians. It will provide a forum for examining gender and sexuality that is both multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary. As clinicians and scholars who have written and practiced at the intersection of feminist theory and clinical psychoanalysis, the Editors are especially interested in those areas of controversy that invite the divergent perspectives and insights of different disciplines. Early issues of SGS will focus on transgender identities and intersexuality; contemporary readings of the category of perversion; puberty and adolescence revised and revisited; and the intersections among class, race, and gender in theory, culture, and the clinical situation. The primary goal of SGS is to promote dialogue on these and other timely topics among clinicians, researchers, and theorists. Consonant with this goal, the journal will also publish related work from the humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences, where questions involving gender and sexuality are currently in lively debate."

This study explores how inter racial couples experience their life together and negotiate race and gender in their relationships. Ten black-white couples were interviewed individually and conjointly and the descriptive data was analyzed using the method of constant comparison. Results reflect the ways in which inter racial couples struggle to employ, resist, and transform the discourse of homogeneity in their relationship. Black spouses compared to white spouses demonstrate a greater awareness of and sensitivity to social resistance to the constitution of their relationship, and black spouses' familial and personal histories have sometimes relegated to silence in the couple relationship. Implications for family therapists working with inter racial couples are discussed.

Sepharadi Women in Israel: Identity, Family and Change
Claire Rabin
Tali Lahav

Israel is a "melting pot" society. The challenges of integrating a large number of immigrants from all over the world has not been without its price. The subsuming of cultural variety within the dominant cultural identity has been especially oppressive for people of color. The dominant cultural identity is white, European, and Western in orientation. Jews from North Africa, Yemen, India, Iraq or Iran have been marginalized by a subtle racism rarely discussed openly. Recently people of color have been "coming out of the closet" in Israel. Public figures, politicians and artists are uncovering how racism has played a part in their lives. Jewish Sepharadi women have suffered the effects of both racism (due to their dark skin color) and sexism due to patriarchal elements still existing in the context of modern Israel. Coming from varied non-Western cultures (North African, Yemen, Iraq, Iran, and India) that are highly patriarchal and male-dominant, these women experience the impact of social change perhaps more than any other group. This paper will discuss issues related to feminine identity of Jewish Sepharadi women of color in Israel. We will propose identity strategies that these women have used in order to create continuity of identity despite oppressive racism and sexism.

Two brief vignettes demonstrate how different women use different identity strategies. Some women of color maintain their traditional ethnic and feminine identity expected of her as a woman, spouse and mother. Other women reject their ethnic and feminine identity and adopt Western roles through personal achievement and autonomy. For those in the helping professions, understanding how ethnic identity issues relates to emotional distress can be helpful. Two detailed case descriptions are presented which show the dilemmas of treating women from traditional ethnic groups. Western society developed the concept of "therapy," often replacing the clergy, the clan elders and anyone representing moral codes, examples of behavior, the old lore and the traditional healers of traditional Jewish culture. As such, therapy poses a threat to women from traditional cultures within a Western oriented "modern" society. The importance of family to Sepharadi women is discussed in light of the previous discussion related to identity and with regard to issues related to treatment.

Leaving the "Professional Home":
Women in Mental Health Professions
Louise Kessel
Maxine Todres
Suzanna Av-Ron

This paper explores the "leaving home" process that professional women experience upon leaving mental health organizations. It examines some of the parallel processes of individual growth and organizational development in the mental health systems and analyzes the transitions that are normative in professional life. It assumes that the process for women will differ from that of men and it relates to some of the ways that socialization reinforces women's dependency needs. It discusses how these needs are complementary with the nature of the helping professions. The paper identifies some contributing factors that determine whether the leave-taking will be "health," with normative manifestations of sadness and loss, or regressive and non-ego-enhancing, accompanied by trauma, anger and rejection. It illustrates some of the issues that arise in vignettes, describing the leave-taking process for two professional women.

REFLECTION

The Marginalization of Intimate Friendship Between Women Within the Context of Therapy
Kimberly R. Flemke

The purpose of this paper is to explore intimate friendship between women and to examine how it is marginalized within the context of systemic therapy. I argue that the field of marriage and family therapy is a microcosm of societal norms, as patriarchal and heterosexist notions continue to inform clinical perceptions of intimacy. The narrowly defined relational categories of marriage and family therapy will be considered and critiqued. To understand the dynamics that perpetuate this oppression of women, a historical perspective will be employed to provide a context for current friendship patterns.

Adding Aging and Gender to the Women’s Health Agenda
Tracy Weitz, MPA
Carroll L. Estes, PhD

The complex interaction of medical, social, and economic factors that affect women’s wellness as they age requires a new paradigm that bridges the gap between those who are concerned about aging issues and those concerned about women’s health. In this article, we begin this endeavor by advancing three interrelated themes: (1) there is a gendered relationship between socioeconomic structures and health over time; (2) there are gender-specific implications of health care financing and policy; and (3) there are health consequences to the gendered nature of caring.

The Impact of Men’s and Women’s Retirement on Marital Relations: A Comparative Analysis
Liat Kallk, PhD

The study examined whether men’s and women’s retirement have a differential impact on several aspects of marital life: Power relations (as reflected in decision-making), spousal resources, division of household tasks, and quality of marriage. Questionnaires were distributed to a sample of 519 pre-retired and retired Israelis. The findings indicate that in general, both men’s and women’s retirement have a similar impact on marital relations in all of the areas examined. No appreciable change in spousal resources was found after retirement, but there was evidence of change in decision-making patterns about spending time and carrying out feminine and general tasks. Retired respondents of both sexes reported fewer marital complaints than the pre-retired respondents, but also expressed less marital enjoyment. It was also found that men’s retirement has a different impact than women’s, on decisions about household affairs and performance of feminine tasks. In addition, gender-based differences were found in several areas, irrespective of employment status. The women reported higher quality of marriage than did the men, and more resources for strengthening the family, whereas the men perceived themselves as making more decisions in the important areas of life, as more hardy, and as controlling the family’s financial resources.

Responding to Social Service and Health Care Needs of Aging Women Veterans
Nina M. Silverstein, PhD
Jennifer L. Moorhead, MS

This is a study about aging women veterans who served in the military during the 1940s, 1950s and 1960s. The Veterans Administration (VA) represents a formal network of health and support services that offers a wide range of benefits for veterans. However, older women veterans may not be aware of, or benefit from, all that may be available to them. The purpose of this study was to learn about aging women veterans’ knowledge and utilization of services and benefits available through the VA. Telephone interviews were conducted in April 1998 with 220 women veterans in Massachusetts who were age 60+ years.

There was generally strong identification with veterans’ organizations among the women surveyed. These women veterans were likely to receive medical care, a major benefit available through the VA. The benefits veterans were least likely to know about included services that may be particularly relevant and helpful to an aging veteran, such as long-term care and home adaptation services. Strategies are suggested to enhance outreach efforts to aging veterans.

Experiencing Undesired Daily Life Events, Instrumental Functioning, Social Support and Well-Being of Israeli Elderly Women: Comparison Between Caregivers/Non-Caregivers for Adult Children with Mental Retardation
Arie Rimmonen, PhD, DSW
Miriam Muraver, PhD

This study is a comparative analysis of Israeli elderly women who are caregivers or non-caregivers for adult children with mental retardation. It examines the impact of caregiving on the daily life events, instrumental functioning, social support, and well-being of these women. The results indicate that caregivers experience more undesired daily events, have lower levels of instrumental functioning, and report less social support and well-being compared to non-caregivers.

Risk Status Related to Knowledge of Osteoporosis in Older Women

Linda Cox Curry, PhD, RN
Mildred O. Hogstel, PhD, RN, C

Background: The objectives of this study were to: (1) identify common risk factors for osteoporosis, (2) relate risk factors to knowledge of osteoporosis, and (3) teach prevention, diagnosis, and treatment strategies for women at risk.

Methods: A descriptive exploratory design was used to assess the osteoporosis risk factors of 211 women age 60 and over living in the community in a large city in a southwestern state. Participants in 15 different sites completed a demographic data form, an osteoporosis Risk Factor Card, and a pre-test about osteoporosis. After participating in a 50-minute educational program, they completed a post-test.

Results: The mean score on the Risk Factor Card was 3.00 out of a total possible score of 11. The most frequent risk factors identified were race, small frame, and early menopause. Using a two-tailed Pearson correlation, there was no significant correlation between being at risk and a person's knowledge of osteoporosis prior to or after the educational program. Using a one-tailed t-test, there was a significant increase in knowledge from pre-test to post-test.

Conclusion: Additional educational programs might increase awareness of risk factors and behaviors likely to enhance bone health. All older women should be encouraged to initiate discussion regarding osteoporosis with their health care providers. Physicians, nurses, social workers, and others also should assess their client's knowledge of osteoporosis.

Who was Lilith?
In the Garden of Eden, long before the eating of the apple, the Holy One created the first human beings—a man, Adam, and a woman, Lilith. Lilith said “We are equal because we are created from the same earth.”
— from The Alphabet of Ben Sira, 26:1-2

18     FIRST PERSON     Time & Again. Celebrating the five-year anniversary of her breast cancer diagnosis, our contributing writer dared to be different.

22     TRIBUTE     MAMM remembers Gail Regan and Bernice Barber, who committed themselves to helping others with cancer until the end.

27     MOTHER'S SON     Role Reversal. How three sons helped pick up the slack for their mom as she went through breast cancer treatment.

38     CALENDAR     A selection of fundraisers, educational programs and other events throughout the country.

64     CANCER GIRL     The Write Stuff. Our columnist recalls the annoying paper chase that her insurance company let loose.

FEATURES

28     EXTRAORDINARY MEN     by Stacie Stukin. Women aren't the only women's cancer activists. This month's issue spotlights four ordinary, yet extraordinary, men who've joined the fight against breast and reproductive cancers.

34     A VIRTUAL COMMUNITY     by Musa Mayer. Thousands of women with cancer find friends, comfort and information via online support groups. Learn from a veteran why these e-mail-based networks work so well.

38     WIT AND WISDOM     by Liz Galst. Photos by Melissa Ann Pinney. In the fourth installment of our yearlong documentary about the life of a Chicago ovarian cancer support group, members attend the award-winning drama W't.

42     PROTECTING PATIENTS     by Annette Fuentes. Financial conflicts of interest on the part of researchers and the institutions or companies that sponsor clinical trials are endemic. MAMM investigates their impact on patient safety and trial results.

30  DOCUMENTARY 'Some Sense of Relief', by Liz Galst. Photographs by Melissa Ann Pinney. Mary Gaber, newest member of the Saint Joseph Hospital ovarian cancer support group, decides to discontinue treatment for her Stage IV disease.

34  WHY ARE SO MANY BLACK WOMEN DYING OF BREAST CANCER? by Liz Galst. Black women are less likely to develop breast cancer than white women, but more likely to die from the disease. MAMM explores the debate over the causes of higher mortality rates: Are they solely socioeconomic or biological as well?

42  STAR POWER by Jami Bernard. Actress and diet guru Suzanne Somers doesn't want people to start taking Iscador, a mistletoe extract, to treat their breast cancer just because she is. But is it possible to make such disclaimers in a celebrity-driven culture such as ours?

38 WHAT YOU’D NEVER EXPECT WHEN YOU’RE EXPECTING

She’s written books about empowering women, but when it came time to give birth, culture critic Naomi Wolf was shocked to discover just how little power pregnant women have. This excerpt from her new book, Misconception, describes what went wrong—and what can be done to improve the birthing biz.

52 THE DYKES NEXT DOOR

Cartoonist Alison Bechdel has built an enthusiastic following with her witty Dykes To Watch Out For. Now, as dyke subculture moves toward the mainstream, Bechdel’s take is changing with the times—as are her readers. Can she “cross over?”

BY JUDITH LEVINE

60 RUNNING WITH THE WOLF

Guadalupe Bendí, known as La Loba (The Wolf), is a political leader from a destitute slum in Mexico. Her cutthroat tactics brought services to her town, and made her one of the nation’s most powerful ward bosses—until the 2000 elections changed everything.

Errata

In our last issue, "Feminist Ethics and the Law, I" (Volume 28), the title of Angela Putino's Amiche mie isteriche was misidentified. Additionally, Elena Basile's Discourse, Truth, Government translates an excerpt of Putino's text. We regret these oversights.

Coalition Politics and the Limits of State Feminism in Chile
Lisa Baldez

Studies of government agencies for women identify a series of factors necessary for a high level of commitment to feminist policy. These include strong grassroots pressure, a highly statist political culture, an organizational structure that facilitates cooperation with other government agencies, international norms, and political will on behalf of government leaders (Friedman 2000; Stets and Matur 1995). In Chile on the eve of democratic transition in 1989, all of these factors were in place. Since then, however, Chile's government agency for women, the National Women's Service (Servicio Nacional de la Mujer, SERNAM), has not proven to be a strong advocate of feminist policies. This study turns to the literature on coalition theory to explain why this is the case. The level of commitment to feminist policy within a women's agency varies depending on whether a government is controlled by a single party or a multiparty coalition. In a single-party government, the agenda of a particular ministry will closely match the platform of the governing party. In a coalition government—whether in a presidential or parliamentary system—the party controlling a particular ministry is in a position to exercise disproportionate control over policy within that jurisdiction, such that the policy may vary from the platform agreed upon by the coalition. In Chile from 1990 to 1999, SERNAM's policies reflected the agenda of the Christian Democrats who served as ministers of the agency. Under their leadership, SERNAM pursued policies that demobilized the women's movement, limited the movement's impact on policy, and helped to build an alternative base of support among women.

A View from the Top: Gender Differences in Legislative Priorities Among State Legislative Leaders
Thomas H. Little
Dana Dunn
Rebecca E. Deen

Women are no longer token participants in the governing process in U.S. state legislatures. Rather, they comprise more than one fifth of the state legislative membership and have become a visible force in leadership, holding about fifteen percent of all leadership positions. Unfortunately, there has been no systematic effort to examine the differences between the issue priorities of men and women leaders. Given the growing number of women in leadership and the importance of leaders as agenda setters, this question warrants attention. Our results indicate that while women are a growing part of modern legislative leadership teams, they are less prominent in key leadership positions. Women leaders in our sample do have legislative agendas distinct from their male counterparts. Specifically, women leaders are more likely to report issues of traditional concern to women: health care, social services, women's family and children's issues, and the environment as priorities. They are less likely than are men to emphasize taxes, budget matters, public safety, institutional regulation and matters of insurance or product liability as legislative priorities. Further, we find that differences between women and men leaders remain significant when controls for party, race, experience, type of leadership position and region are included in the model.
Thi.f article analyzes the varying and sometimes contradictory deployments of symbols of womanhood in the articulation of nationalist identity in the south Indian state of Tamil Nadu. I argue that the historical shift of Tamil nationalist identity as predominantly a caste critique to an identity of “common culture” partly hinged on a reconfiguration of the nationalists’ gender rhetoric. I examine contemporary Tamil politics to demonstrate ways that Jayalalitha Jayaram was able to manipulate nationalist symbols of womanhood and, at the same time, was constrained by them. In so doing, I point to both the possibility and the difficulty of maneuvering within and against the subject positions made available to women by nationalist discourses.

Still the Angel in the Household: Political Cartoons of Elizabeth Dole’s Presidential Campaign
Patricia Gilmartin

This study is an analysis of political cartoons published about Elizabeth Dole during her 1999 campaign for the Republican presidential nomination. A number of earlier researchers have examined media texts to evaluate how female, as compared to male, candidates are dealt with, but very few studies have focused on the representation of female candidates in political cartoons. In this examination of over 750 cartoons about the campaign in general, only 30 were found to be about Dole—thus leading to the conclusion that political cartoonists paid her little attention of any sort. In these 30 cartoons, more often than not, Dole was represented not as a presidential candidate or even as an independent person, but as the wife of Robert Dole. She further was sexualized and domesticated by: (1) the settings in which she was depicted (often her home); (2) representations of her as the object of her husband’s sexual revitalization by Viagra, the erectile dysfunction drug; and (3) her nurturance of her husband Robert’s insecurities concerning his possible role as “First Husband.” A comparison of the cartoons about Dole with cartoons of her co-hort of male candidates highlights the gender difference in cartoonists’ representations of the candidates.

Jayalalitha Jayaram and the Politics of Tamil Womanhood

Look It Up Under “F”:
Dialogues of Emerging and Experienced Feminists
Sharon Horne
Susan Mathews
Pam Detrie
Mary Burke
Becky Cook

This article explores the process of integrating a feminist identity for both experienced and emerging feminists. A qualitative analysis was utilized to identify themes in two group dialogues. The analysis indicated that the era in which experienced feminists were initiated into feminism and this movement as liberating and empowering, while emerging feminists described a process of initial resistance when encountering feminism. Emerging feminists discussed having to overcome negative media images of feminism before becoming motivated to integrate this identity. Both groups related challenges in communicating feminist principles and the practices they used to meet these difficulties. Findings in this article are discussed in relation to the need for a sensitive presentation of feminism to young women in classrooms or professional settings.

Rising Tide: Taking Our Place as Young Feminist Psychologists
Cindy M. Bruns
Colleen Trimble

Many wonder what the third wave of feminism will bring as houseto young feminists begin taking their place in various aspects of professional psychology. We begin by examining how the developmental context of young feminists can present us from bringing the riches of previous generations into our own work. We also examine how our context allows us to make unique contributions in feminism. We will discuss our attempts to claim a notion of power that is neither hierarchal nor egalitarian, but relational. Finally, we will end by considering the implications of relational power for the third wave and feminist psychology.

The Trouble with Power
Cindy B. Veldhuis

Power in therapy is an issue of great import. As feminist therapists, we work to create a relationship in which power is shared, and where mutuality is the goal. Yet denying power differentials in the therapy relationship may have deleterious consequences. Believing that we are powerless or have no power relative to others may be one of the most important issues related to harm in therapy. This article explores the ways in which a lack of recognition of power may be damaging through a discussion of women’s relationship to power, power in therapy, and how denial of power may be associated with harm in therapy relationships.

Exploring the Rift: An Intergenerational Dialogue About Feminism
Natalie Porter
Dalia G. Dicker
Holley E. Ferrell
Laura Helton

Four psychologists, two “older” faculty members and two “younger” students, met to discuss their perspectives on contemporary feminism. The dialogue was intended to give the older feminists an opportunity to listen to their younger colleagues. A consciousness-raising group format with some structured questions was used. The report focuses on the younger women’s thoughts and experiences. Among the topics touched on are: stereotypes of feminism, divisions among feminists, women’s sexuality, political activism, sexual harassment, speaking out in graduate school, feminism in popular culture, and collaboration among feminists. The younger feminists articulated the need for more mentoring and support and questioned whether older feminists have been willing to see the goals and values of feminism adapted to keep pace with ever-changing societal contexts.

The Mentoring Process for Feminist Therapists: One Trainee's Perspective

Jill Rader

Empirical research and personal narratives highlight the important role of mentorship in the training of feminist scholars and therapists. This article explores what we know (and don't know) about feminist mentoring, particularly as it relates to the practice of feminist therapy. A personal narrative of one trainee's experience of mentoring in her development as a feminist therapist follows. The article concludes with suggestions for other feminist therapy trainers.

Feminism's Third Wave: Surfing to Oblivion?

Lisa Rubin

Carol Nemeroff

“Third wave” feminists, raised in the wake of an established feminist movement as well as a strong anti-feminist backlash, are beginning to define their own feminist agenda. “Third wave” feminists are exploring the contradictions in their lived experience as feminists, and examining the intersection of feminism with their other identities. Young feminists’ self-expression has been characterized by feminists and non-feminists as “self-asserted” and “women’s work of public purpose” (Belloff, 1998, p. 57 & 60). In this essay, we provide an alternative view of “third wave” expression, seeing young feminists’ honesty in their struggles with various identities as a resurgence of grassroots activism; a return to “the personal.” In this essay, we call for an inter-generational dialogue between second and third wave feminists, and encourage feminist therapists to support and validate young feminists.

Psychotherapy Partnership Approach with Adolescent Girls

Norine G. Johnson

The Partnership Approach described in this article is designed to empower the adolescent girl in her psychological work through a process of shared decision-making. Through the integration of feminist therapy texts with current research on adolescent girls, the Partnership Approach focuses on valuing diversity and valuing strengths in today’s adolescent girl clients, their families and their communities.

KEYWORDS. Adolescents, girls, feminist approaches

Intimate Betrayal: Domestic Violence in Lesbian Relationships
Ellyn Kaschak

Forging Community Links to Address Abuse in Lesbian Relationships
Paula B. Poorman

This study is a comprehensive review of lesbian domestic abuse in the psychological, sociological, legal, and social work literature. Planning intervention and prevention strategies is discussed in light of what is known and what remains to be known. A strong argument is made to turn attention away from the elusive task of documenting prevalence and incidence characteristics, and forge the community links needed to develop effective intervention and prevention strategies.

Nowhere to Hide: Lesbian Battering, Homophobia, and Minority Stress
Kimberly F. Balsam

This article examines the relationship between lesbian battering, homophobia (both external and internalized), and the stress of living as a member of an oppressed minority. While domestic violence in lesbian relationships parallels domestic violence in heterosexual relationships in many ways, the context of homophobia in society, in addition to sexism, creates some unique dynamics, issues, and barriers to change. Drawing upon a review of the theoretical and empirical literature, as well as the author's clinical experience as a lesbian psychotherapist, the impact of the homophobic context on lesbian battering is examined from the perspective of victims, perpetrators, and helping systems.

Knowledge About Heterosexual versus Lesbian Battering Among Lesbians
Erin M. McLaughlin
Patricia D. Rozee

There's growing evidence to suggest that abuse in lesbian relationships does exist and may occur on a greater scale than most people are aware of. This paper will define battering in lesbian relationships, its prevalence and characteristics, critique the ability of traditional feminist models to explain lesbian battering, and address the consequent lack of community response to battered lesbians. We will also present results of a study indicating that the silence about lesbian battering among both feminist theorists and activists has contributed to the invisibility of lesbian battering, and thus lesbians' own lack of knowledge about lesbian battering. The results of this study support the hypothesis that the lesbian community is more familiar with phenomena associated with domestic violence in heterosexual relationships than with violence in intimate lesbian relationships. Community and clinical implications of the findings are discussed.

KEYWORDS. Domestic violence, lesbian battering, same-sex violence

Decentering Heterosexuality: Responses of Feminist Counselors to Abuse in Lesbian Relationships
Janice L. Ristock

This paper reports on research involving eight focus group discussions with seventy-five feminist counselors who respond to their work in abuse in lesbian relationships. Focus group discussions allowed for information to be gathered on their observations about same-sex partner abuse and at the same time provided occasion for critical reflection. The focus groups illustrate how thoroughly we rely on heterosexual discourse and feminist categories and constructs to think about violence, and how these can impede our efforts to understand and respond effectively to same-sex partner abuse. Overall, the paper encourages more opportunities for group discussion among counselors so that we can share important insights into same-sex partner abuse and encourage a critical analysis of therapeutic practices and the normative assumptions behind them.

Lesbians Who Abuse Their Partners: Using the FIRO-B to Assess Interpersonal Characteristics
Paula B. Poormon
Sheila M. Seeau

This study explored the functional, interpersonal style of a small group of lesbians who had abused their partners (N = 15) and enrolled in a pilot feminist abuse cessation therapy program. Each completed a Fundamental Interpersonal Relations Orientation-Behavior scale (FIRO-B), a self-report assessment tool that measures expressed and wanted inclusion, control, and affection. Robust findings from the small, ethnically homogeneous sample are discussed in terms of their implications for understanding the interpersonal dynamic of control in lesbian relationships in which there is abuse. Future directions for therapy and research are also outlined.

Domestic Violence in Lesbian Relationships
Diane Helene Miller
Kathryn Greene
Vickie Causby
Barbara W. White
Leiteit L. Lockhart

Increasingly, therapists and researchers have focused attention on domestic violence in lesbian relationships. To date, however, most research has described the incidence and types of physical violence and abuse. The present study sought to explore predictors of domestic violence in lesbian relationships. Lesbian participants filled out a survey measuring physical violence and physical aggression as well as relational and personality variables. Results indicate that lesbians do report some degree of domestic violence, characterized more often by physical aggression than by physical violence. Physical aggression was best predicted by fusion, followed by self-esteem and independence. For physical violence, however, control was the most important predictor, followed by independence, self-esteem, and fusion. Implications and directions for future research are discussed.
