

For the past 18-and-a-half years I have worn several hats at the Law School, particularly those of Director of Alumni Relations and Director of Career Services. In 1976, when I started, such job sharing was not uncommon either here at our School or at law schools throughout the country. But times change: Changes in the market for law graduates have greatly changed the nature of work in Career Services, as well as its volume, while the necessity of raising funds from our alumni becomes more apparent every day. Clearly something had to give.

By the time you read this, one of my hats will have been passed. Anne Courtney, a 1991 graduate of our School and the Director of Career Services at the University of Louisville Law School since her graduation, has accepted the position of Director of Career Services at our School. Ann's talent, training and time will allow greatly enhanced services to begin flowing to our students and alumni. As the year ends a second person will be recruited to ensure that our School has a level of service in this area compatible with our stature in the legal community.

This has been a bittersweet decision for me. I have enjoyed working with hundreds of students each year and with the hundreds of employers who have sought out our talented graduates. Each year I celebrate some anniversary of my 29th birthday partly in self-denial of being any older but also because our students are always about the same average age. How can I be getting any older if they aren't? Many of them have become close friends, people I continue to rely on for assistance with alumni events, class reunions or leadership responsibility in the Law Alumni Association.

My new duties, however, are not really new, just current activities enlarged to serve more alumni and the greater demands our current economy places on publicly assisted schools. So it isn't goodbye to any of you, you'll be hearing from me!

J. Edmund Smith ('64) wrote to answer my recent question concerning a possible appearance at the Law School by Jimmy Hoffa in the early 1960s. Mr. Smith was able to confirm the report offered by George Whyte ('65). He says, "I attended the seminar and recall that a great deal of controversy was swirling around Mr. Hoffa nationally at the time. I also recall that the local newspaper was irate because Hoffa would not give any of their reporters an interview. The lecture by Mr. Hoffa was quite informative. I remember being impressed by the fact that Mr. Hoffa had a manner of speaking to our class that was totally different than the face he presented in his public appearances, i.e., he sounded like a professor in our seminar."

I also received a copy of a letter from Roy Traynor ('62) to Prof. Gordon Baldwin commenting on Gordon's memorial resolution written upon the death of Prof. Abner Brodie. Roy said, "Back in the days when Wisconsin's law professors were still called 'Mr.' instead of 'Professor', and I was an incessantly working law student, Abner Brodie was the finest teacher of law that I ever had. A lot of the guys didn't warm up to Mr. Brodie because he was pretty blunt and tough in the classroom but that didn't bother me. . . . I was able to easily see beyond the bluntness and the gruffness to appreciate what was being taught by a very kindly and thoughtful person. . . . More than any other teacher, he taught me skills which I still utilize to this day."

Since the last issue was our directory you may not recall the last mystery picture, but Judge Michael Brennan ('64) and G. George Lawrence ('65) had no trouble with it. Between them they identified John Hanson, John Michler, Phil Atinsky, Irv Kahn, Bruce Craig, Howie Myers, Richard Baumann and the Judge himself in the photo. George suggests that the photo was taken at the Hoffman House before the 1963 Homecoming game and that he must have been at the bar getting a drink when it was taken.

Since we are on the subject of Homecoming, this mystery picture was taken during a cane parade. I'd really like to know who is carrying the pig, and why? I think perhaps any warrants which may have been issued from the incident have expired so won't someone please explain this to me?

University of Wisconsin Law School
Continuing Legal Education and Outreach

Announces

Madison Location for National Satellite Programs

The University of Wisconsin Law School is pleased to announce that it has joined the American Law Network (ALN) as a local affiliate. This affiliation will enable Dane County lawyers to attend in Madison programs of national scope presented by distinguished speakers from throughout the country. The UW Law School was encouraged to enter into this arrangement by local lawyers who had attended the network's programs outside Madison. The Madison location will provide convenient access to high-quality and practice-oriented programs presented by the American Bar Association, Practising Law Institute, American Law Institute-American Bar Association, and other national organizations including federal government agencies.

The American Law Network offers continuing legal education programs via satellite to a national audience. The primary purpose of the American Law Network is to enable lawyers and judges to enhance their legal skills and knowledge at significant savings of time, travel, and expense. Approximately 20 to 25 programs will be presented on the network during the next year.

Programs tentatively scheduled for the Spring include:

- How to Requalify Your Retirement Plan After Tax Reform
- Limited Liability Companies
- Annual Spring Pension Law and Practice Update
- Fiduciary Responsibility Issues Under ERISA
- Use of Expert Witnesses in Americans With Disabilities Act Cases

For registration and additional information on upcoming ALN satellite programs, please call Scott Minter or Lynn Thompson at (608) 262-3833 or write to UW Law School, Continuing Education and Outreach, 905 University Avenue, Room 309, Madison, WI 53715-1094.
