Periodical literature is the cutting edge of women’s scholarship, feminist theory, and much of women’s culture. Feminist Periodicals: A Current Listing of Contents is published by the Office of the University of Wisconsin System Women’s Studies Librarian on a quarterly basis with the intent of increasing public awareness of feminist periodicals. It is our hope that Feminist Periodicals will serve several purposes: to keep the reader abreast of current topics in feminist literature; to increase readers’ familiarity with a wide spectrum of feminist periodicals; and to provide the requisite bibliographic information should a reader wish to subscribe to a journal or to obtain a particular article at her library or through interlibrary loan. (Users will need to be aware of the limitations of copyright law with regard to photocopying of copyrighted materials.)

Table of contents pages from current issues of major feminist journals are reproduced in each issue of Feminist Periodicals, followed by a comprehensive annotated listing of all journals we have selected. As publication schedules vary enormously, not every periodical will have table of contents pages reproduced in each issue of FP. The annotated listing provides the following information on each journal:

1. Year of first publication.
2. Frequency of publication.
3. Subscription prices (print only; for online prices, consult publisher).
4. Subscription address.
6. Editorial address (if different from subscription address).
8. OCLC, Inc. Control Number.
9. Selected publications in which the journal is indexed.
10. Selected fulltext products in which publication appears or vendor intermediaries who make the full text available.
11. Subject focus/statement of purpose of the journal.

Please note that in the actual text, only the numbers 1 to 11 are used to identify the different categories of information.
Our goal in Feminist Periodicals is to represent English-language periodicals from around the world that focus on gender, women's studies, or women's issues. Generally, we do not include mainstream newsstand magazines. We are also unable to include periodicals that lack a complete table of contents. We encourage feminist serials to build a full table of contents into their regular format to facilitate possible inclusion in FP and indexing elsewhere.

University of Wisconsin System users: To locate these periodicals within the UW System, do a UW System/Universal Borrowing search from your campus catalog (labeled variously “Other Libraries,” “More Libraries,” “Other Catalogs,” “Other UW Catalogs,” etc.) If information on actual holdings (volumes and issues) is not in the records retrieved, contact the Reference Department at the library of interest.

Suggestions for improvements of Feminist Periodicals are gratefully received. We would particularly appreciate assistance from readers in the UW System with our efforts to keep the holding information complete and up to date. Please let us know about new subscriptions, subscriptions we have overlooked, cancellations, or other pertinent information.

Feminist Periodicals: A Current Listing of Contents (ISSN 1941-725X) is published online, quarterly, by Phyllis Holman Weisbard, UW System Women’s Studies Librarian, 430 Memorial Library, 728 State Street, Madison, WI 53706. Phone (608) 263-5754. Email: wiswsl@library.wisc.edu. Website: http://womenst.library.wisc.edu

Feminist Periodicals is available free of charge at http://womenst.library.wisc.edu/publications/feminist-periodicals.html. A subscription to the publications of the Office of the UW-System Women’s Studies Librarian includes our print publications Feminist Collections: A Quarterly of Women’s Studies Resources and New Books on Women, Gender, & Feminism along with email notification of each new issue of Feminist Periodicals. Subscription rates: Wisconsin subscriptions: $10.00 (individuals affiliated with the UW System), $20.00 (organizations affiliated with the UW System), $20.00 (individuals or non-profit women’s programs), $30.00 (institutions). Out-of-state subscriptions: $35.00 (individuals & women's programs in the U.S.), $65.00 (institutions in the U.S.), $50.00 (individuals & women's programs in Canada/Mexico), $80.00 (institutions in Canada/Mexico), $55.00 (individuals & women's programs elsewhere outside the U.S.), $85.00 (institutions elsewhere outside the U.S.). Wisconsin subscriber amounts include state tax (except UW organizations amount). Feminist Periodicals was originally a print publication (ISSN 0742-7433) from v.1, n.1, 1981 through v.27, n.4, Fall 2007. Printed back issues of these issues are available for $10 each. All prices include postage. Publications of the Office of the UW-System Women's Studies Librarian are available free of charge to UW Women’s Studies Offices, UW Campus Women’s Centers, and UW Libraries.

Back issues of Feminist Periodicals are archived online at http://digital.library.wisc.edu/1793/259.

THE UNFAITHFUL FEMINIST .......... 16
Other women thwart the traditional feminine role of the self-sacrificing, restrained and virtuous woman whose relationship revolves around becoming a wife. They upset compulsory heterosexuality by engaging in an unscripted, socially taboo relationship. At least, that’s one theory.
by Kay Carter

SHE READS YOU, YA, YA! .......... 20
Young adult fiction is hugely popular. The question is, does YA fiction set the stage for sex stereotypes or cast it be a liberating force for girls?

SWEPT UP IN FORGIVENESS .......... 32
Women are bombarded with forgiveness messages in magazines and books and on TV talk shows like Oprah. There are dozens of classes, courses and workshops available on the subject. However, the ubiquity of forgiveness information does not automatically endow it with ethical authority.

8 Everyday climate experts
Several Danish housing areas have successfully trained women from ethnic minority backgrounds to be local role models for living in a more climate conscious way. The Environmental Ambassadors Project combines climate expertise and empowerment.

12 Gender equal and sustainable transport Setting national targets for gender equality and sustainability is one thing. Putting these into practice at a regional and local level is something completely different. The decision of the Swedish city of Malmö to introduce gender mainstreaming in the development of a new public transport plan resulted in visits both to the hospital and the police.

15 Local adaptation below the melting glaciers
The Hindu Kush-Himalaya is an area where the impact of climate change is receiving increasing attention. Norway is one of the agencies supporting research in the area and demanding the inclusion of a gender perspective. What is important, though, is to avoid reinforcing the generalisations about women in the South and their vulnerability.

18 Gender is the key to a green future
If the battle against climate change is to be successful, innovation and new ways of thinking are needed. This is something society cannot achieve without women.

20 Emissions exported
Solutions to climate changes are often sought within technological innovation and eco-friendlier production. The researcher Annika Carlson-Kanyama, however, approaches the issue from a different angle. She focuses on consumption and believes that individual emission allowances would be a good idea.

22 Untouched and to be conquered
Climate change has put the Arctic back on the map of geopolitics. But does the melting of the ice threaten peace and stability in the region? And what is the relevance of feminism in this context?

26 Column: More effective climate policies
Gender aspects make climate change policies more effective, writes Virginija Langbakk is Director of the European Institute for Gender Equality, EIGE, in a column.

27 A focus for Europe in 2012
Denmark will hold the Presidency of the EU Council in January-June 2012. The Danish Government and the European Institute for Gender Equality, EIGE, have agreed to focus the analysis and discussions on gender and climate change.

28 Striving to finance climate solutions
Adaptation funding must take into account the requests of vulnerable groups, local communities and ecosystems and the contributions of holders of traditional and indigenous knowledge. Gotelind Alber from the NGO GenderCC – Women for Climate Justice, is involved in the negotiations for the Green Climate Fund.

The Pen(is) in the Woman’s Hand: Narrative and Sexual Subterfuge in Marie de France’s “Laüstic”
Karen J. Taylor ........................................................................................................................................ 14

This article examines Marie de France’s lai “Laüstic,” focusing upon the love affair between the married woman and the knight who lives next door to her, and showing how this is very subtly represented in the text. It proposes an innovative reading of the nightingale at the heart of the lai; the woman listens to the nightingale’s song every night, and her husband violently kills it in a murderous rage. Reading the figure of the nightingale through feminist theory and through research into Medieval French language, the article shows how this lai may function as a euphemism for sex and sexuality.

Making a Case: Mmes de CourceUes, Mazarin, and Villedieu in their own defense
Sarah Nelson ............................................................................................................................................. 22

A central problem for women’s self-representational writing is the degree to which it is expected to conform to conventions of confession and truth-telling, including the assumption by non feminist and feminist critics alike that the crux of the truth for any woman writer must be related to her body and sexuality. Both Duchesse Mazarin and her friend the marquise de Courceules used their memoirs, written in the 1670s, to appeal to the law courts as well as the court of public opinion to ratify their autonomy. However, in the writing of their memoirs both women were in the unfortunate position of answering public charges brought against them by their husbands and centered on accusations of sexual impropriety, and they were thus subject to what Leigh Gilmore describes as “the intricate structural dynamics of the confession in which, according to prescribed rules, one is authorized to question and the other is bound to confess.” For Mazarin and Courcelles, obliged by the real-life repercussions of their writing to “tell the truth” convincingly, the reading public and the officers of the court were entirely authorized to question and judge, and the power of médiasce centered on sexual conduct held tremendous sway in that context. On the other hand, by forthrightly “lying”—that is, by overtly mixing identifiable reality with outrageous fiction in the form of a parodic pseudo-memoir—Madame de Villedieu can do what they cannot; she can gain the upper hand by exposing the inevitability of public condemnation for unconventional women and thereby, make the strongest case for women’s autonomy.

George Sand’s Nanon and the Nineteenth-Century’s “New Autobiographers”

Annabelle M. Rea ................................................................. 34

In the nineteenth century, the Rousseauian narration of an individual life began to take over from the eyewitness account of history, the aristocratic mémoire. A rapid survey of a number of peasant and proletarian autobiographies reveals parallels with Sand’s Nanon, a fictional life story of a peasant woman, set at the time of the French Revolution. Sand’s protagonist shares with these peasant and proletarian authors a passionate desire to read, to read, first of all text, second, numbers, and finally, space, and she demonstrates the power and autonomy gained from reading in the three domains. In her 1872 novel, Sand stresses reciprocity: not all knowledge is transferred to the peasant from above; those who work the land also have skills to share. Although the conclusion looks briefly at the novel from the hypothetical point of view of “what if”—what would Rousseau’s Confessions or his Emile have looked like if a woman had written them?—Sand’s novel belongs solidly to the nineteenth century, characterized by historian Roger Chartier as witnessing “l’entrée en écriture de toute une société,” with its explosion in life writing.

Alexandra David-Néel’s Travels in India: Interview and Discursive Self-Representation

Margaret E. McCollery ................................................................................. 43

In “Alexandra David-Néel’s Travels in India: Interview and Discursive Self Representation” I argue that David-Néel was not, as some critics have believed, a “spiritualist” but rather that she undertook the study of religion through interviews with important religious leaders in India whose belief-systems and practices were varied in nature. The primary corpus of this study is letters written to her husband and published as Correspondance avec son Mari (1904-1941). In particular, I trace a construction of self that occurs as a result of the articulation of ideas discovered in this interview process. These ideas reveal important aspects of Alexandra David-Neel’s own belief system in relationship to her study of religion. One of the interviews of central importance to this comparative study is the one she initiated with the 13th Dalai Lama of Tibet, and reflects his deep interest in the West. I also follow her travels to the headquarters of the Theosophical Society, where she makes telling observations about Westerners residing there to study the principles of theosophy.

100 Years of ‘Imaginary Renée Viviens’

Tama Lea Engelking.................................................................................... 52

Elaine Marks coined the phrase “Imaginary Renée Viviens” to describe how Pauline Tam, the British poet who wrote Sapphic poetry in French under the pseudonym Renée Vivien, has been used by various writers, readers and critics to promote their own ideological agendas. Mark’s expression is well suited to a retrospective look at Vivien’s reception in the 100 years since the poet’s death in 1909. This overview focuses on the “Imaginary Renée Viviens” created during three key moments—the centenary of Vivien’s birth in 1977, the year 1986, and the centenary of her death in 2009. These moments serve to highlight the ways that Vivien has been read in the past, and to put into perspective how readers are remembering her today, both in light of the fears she expressed for her own future reception more than a century earlier, as well as the many changes that are affecting the literary marketplace in the 21st century.

Sujet buvard, Sujet bavard: Nina Bouraoui’s Words to Say It

Adrienne Angelo.......................................................................................... 79

This essay offers a comparative analysis of Marie Cardinal’s Les Mots pour le dire (1975) and Nina Bouraoui’s Mes mauvaises pensées (2005). Cardinal’s autofictional exploration of the curative powers of life-writing centers on the first-person narrator’s seven-year psychoanalytic treatment. From this experience, the narrator learns that her physical and psychosomatic symptoms stem foremost from a psychological trauma that she is unable to name. Significantly for this female writer who struggles to find “the words to say it,” female illness in Cardinal’s text is one inherited from and shared with the mother, and it is this transmission that lies at the heart of a struggle for autonomy related to language. Although written thirty years later, Bouraoui’s novel shares remarkable similarities with Cardinal’s work, especially regarding the notion of confessional writing that is at stake in this more recent text.
Bouraoui’s novel serves both as a pseudo-transcription of the first-person narrator’s sessions with her analyst and, perhaps most notably, as a literary confession as she recalls (and rewrites) her own problematic relationship with her mother and her female lovers and her violent thoughts that these affective bonds have unleashed. Why, this essay asks, have these two women of dual origins turned to psychoanalysis in their respective engagements with life-writing? How does Algeria’s history come to occupy the space of psychic wounds for these women writers?

Le discours préfaciel dans la traduction américaine de L’Intérieur de la nuit, de Léonora Miano

Eloïse Brezault ................................................................. 91

Cet article explore le discours préfaciel du premier roman de la Camerounaise Léonora Miano, L’Intérieur de la nuit, nouvellement traduit en anglais chez Nebraska Press, par Dark Heart of the Night. La préface par Terese Svoboda, contestée par Miano au moment de la sortie du livre, agit comme un discours d’autorité problématique qui met à mal les idées originelles de Miano, par une série de clichés sur l’Afrique violente et barbare. Discours explicatif et laudatif, la préface permet alors de légitimer ce roman africain sur la scène littéraire américaine en faisant abstraction des questionnements initiaux de Miano. Dans cette «zone de contact» que représente la préface, Svoboda s’est réappropriée, par un acte de réécriture qui peut rappeler ironiquement l’entreprise coloniale, l’histoire de Miano, pour en donner une explication qui n’a plus rien à voir avec le texte initial.

Histoire engagée, histoire occultée: Fabienne Kanor’s Humus

Renée Larrier ................................................................. 103

In this era of revisiting the transatlantic slave trade and slavery the focus is placed most often on abolition or prominent male leaders. This renewed interest follows decades of silence and denial surrounding the centuries-long systems, especially when it was a question of enslaved women. Fabienne Kanor’s novel Humus (2006), inspired by an actual 1774 event off the West African coast, aims to expose, illustrate, and inscribe women’s resistance to involuntary servitude. I argue that by narrating their own stories of captivity and enslavement, these ordinary women, agents of their own liberation, fill in specific gaps in French colonial history. Kanor recovers and transmits the histoire occultée of these heroic women for whom slavery was unacceptable. Through Humus their histoire engagée enters into the public arena, giving voice to women who rebelled against the slave trade. Their determination, cooperation, and challenge to power counter their virtual absence from History.

Assia Djebar’s Nulle part dans la maison de mon père: Telling Her Truth and Reconfiguring the World

Anna Rocca ................................................................. 112
Assia Djebar’s most recent work, Nulle part dans la maison de mon père, indirectly involves issues of truths and lies, as well as of the author’s intentions and the readers’ empathy. In particular, it emphasizes the confusion and difficulty of seizing private truths when historical denial affects societies as a whole. For this reason, Nulle part is a work about emotions that does not claim to speak the truth; for the courageous act of unveiling personal and painful events in such a dramatic way always implies a degree of certainty. Searching for the reasons behind her attempted suicide, the author strongly stresses the importance of telling the truth—first, to herself and then, to (and for) her readers. I argue that in doing so, Djebar explores new forms of reconfiguring the world, for to be able to reconstruct reality one needs first to face and trust one’s own feelings as being true. Djebar’s process of historical reconnection with her inner self thus becomes the beginning of both reshaping the world and interacting within it. In addition, when emotional experiences are shared with her readers, the author’s literary recreation eventually achieves its highest expression.

Writing in the language of the other: Nicole Brossard’s La Capture du sombre

Karen McPherson ...................................................................................... 125

In Nicole Brossard’s writings, the horizon has tended to figure future possibilities and an inscription, albeit sometimes fleeting or fragile, of hope. In her 2007 novel La capture du sombre, however, the focus is different. Realizing that “il y a du noir à l’horizon,” the protagonist Anne wants to write a novel in a language that is not her own: “Il me faut maintenant d’autres mots pour tout ce sombre de nature et de civilisation qui vient.” Examining the “sombre” in Brossard’s text, this essay explores the idea that writing in the language of the other might be a way to try to capture (and perhaps disarm?) the threat that it represents. A dense, central section of the novel that circles tighter and tighter around the question of “le mal” suggests why and how writing in the language of the “étrangère” might allow the story to go where no single subject could venture: “Tout se passait comme si cette chose informe et puissante qu’est le mal ne pouvait m’être accessible que dans la langue étrangère puisque moi dans cette langue ce n’est pas moi.”

Mais qu’est-ce que tu as voulu dire là ? L’écrivaine, la traductrice et les nondits

Thérèse Moreau et Christine Reno .................................................................. 136

This article chronicles a labor of love that turned into an intellectual game: how does one translate for the American audience a series of witty feminist tales written in Switzerland that are chock-full of word plays and references specific to French and “Francophone” cultures? The authors describe their joint efforts and the multiple solutions they adopted in translating Thérèse Moreau’s Grand Livre des Recettes Secrètes.

Caring ‘from duty and the heart’: Gendered work and Alzheimer’s disease
Allison Kirkman, pp.2-16

Abstract: Caring for people with dementia remains gendered with women still expected to undertake much of the paid and unpaid caring work in the community. This study draws on survey and interview data collected from 48 women community workers in Alzheimers Societies throughout New Zealand. Through the lens of the women community workers the gendered expectations about paid and unpaid work are revealed. The paper argues that cultural ideas about gender differences in caring abilities have implications for women and men as the population ages and the dementia ‘epidemic’ impacts in New Zealand.

Bodies-as-image? The body made visible in magazine love your body content
Rewa Murphy and Sue Jackson, pp.17-30

Abstract: Love your body discourse is a relatively new feature of contemporary young women’s magazines. This content stakes itself both within and against a history of at least 30-40 years of criticism of the industry for the way in which the fashionably slender and ideal bodies consistently portrayed convey problematic and narrow understandings of both women and their bodies. Taken together, the apparent contradiction of new body love discourse housed within an image-invested media context presents complex questions about the kinds of subjectivities made available to young women, and the social implications of the embodied identities they produce. Informed by a feminist post-structuralist framework, this paper applies these interests to the analysis of one consistent feature of the new love your body magazine and media campaigns: repetitive images of semi- and un-dressed women’s bodies. We note how a magazine context which reduces bodies to the visual intensifies the possible meanings which are readable of such images, and discuss how particular characteristics of these repeated images can contribute to cultural understandings of what it is that is loved (/loveable) about women’s bodies.

Understanding the need for UN Women: Notes for New Zealand civil society
Fleur Roberts, pp.31-46

Abstract: The United Nations (UN) has long been seen as one of the world’s most influential organisations in the movement for gender equality. The UN is unique in its ability to produce binding inter-governmental normative frameworks which have led to legislative and policy reform at the national level, including in New Zealand. The UN has also played an important role through its research, advocacy and programmes. However, during the 2000s many gender equality advocates became increasingly concerned with the gap between policy and practice and the significant weaknesses within the UN system. In particular, the UN has been criticised for providing inadequate resourcing, capacity support and senior-level espousal for its gender architecture. In New Zealand, UNIFEM’s weak presence and low capacity to provide technical support to the government and visible advocacy exemplifies the UN’s past inability to support gender equality at the national level. It is hoped that the recent establishment of UN Women in January 2011 will alleviate many of the issues related to the UN’s gender architecture and signal a new era for the UN’s work on gender equality. This paper explores the core reasons for the imperative reform of the UN’s gender architecture. The paper then analyses whether UN Women has the necessary scope and funding to address the UN’s past failings and deliver tangible results. A strong UN agency... with country-level capacity in New Zealand would fill a gap within New Zealand civil society for a leading specialist organisation for gender equality that not only supports governmental and civil society efforts in New Zealand, but also contributes to equality within the wider Pacific community. Therefore the paper then outlines steps for action for New Zealand civil society organisations to ensure that UN Women lives up to its potential.

Re-positioning the experiences and situation of single mothers: Accounts from Samoa

_Rochelle Stewart-Withers_, pp.47-62

Abstract: Cultural values and societal norms can place a considerable burden on young women to be sexually non-active outside of a marriage, with the understanding that motherhood must occur within marriage. For those who deviate outside what is expected they may find themselves and their children labelled in negative ways and positioned as 'other'. Yet, some cultural and value based frameworks rather than stigmatising and discriminating against single mothers may also offer a contestable space. With this in mind, this paper draws on qualitative field research undertaken in Samoa in 2002, 2004 and 2006 to illustrate how the cultural framework of _fa'asamoa_ (the Samoan way), _'āiga_ (family) and the _feagaiga_, understood to mean balance within relationships and the brother sister relationship might lend themselves to support single mothers. It is also shown how engaging with cultural concepts such as _fa'amagalo_ (seeking forgiveness) and _fa'ailo ga tama_ (to mark or distinguish a child/accepting the baby) means single mothers are not stigmatised and ostracised as individuals or as a social group.

Report

Sexual violence on trial: An update on reform options

_Elisabeth McDonald_, pp.63-69

Abstract: For many years, across many jurisdictions, empirical research has replicated the concerns of women complainants in rape cases. In New Zealand the reforms of the mid-80s have still not significantly addressed the distress felt by those who are just witnesses for the prosecution with very little protection from often harsh and unnecessary cross-examination. The 2006 acquittal of three police officers charged with historical sexual offending put trial process reform in rape cases back on the political agenda. In this short piece, some of the possible reforms that may yet assist those women who take the stand are outlined.

11. "Aspasia is an international peer-reviewed yearbook that brings out the best scholarship in the field of interdisciplinary women’s and gender history focused on—and produced in—Central, Eastern, and Southeastern Europe. This region includes such countries as Albania, Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Bulgaria, Croatia, the Czech Republic, Estonia, Greece, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Macedonia, Moldova, Montenegro, Poland, Romania, Russia, Serbia, Slovakia, Slovenia, Turkey, and Ukraine. In these countries the field of women’s and gender history has developed unevenly and has remained only marginally represented in the "international" canon. Through its contributions, Aspasia transforms "European women’s history" into more than Western European women’s history, as is still often the case, and expands the comparative angle of research on women and gender to all parts of Europe."

It centers the study of Black women and gender within the critical discourses of history, the social sciences, and the humanities. Second, this journal provides an Africana/Black Studies and Women’s Studies cross-field and interdisciplinary venue for Black womanist and Black feminist theories, methodologies, and analyses. Third, it more fully integrates gender as an analytic category, and strengthens Black Women's Studies as a paradigm for studying black women, gender, families, and communities—especially policy-related issues within the broader disciplines of Black Studies and Women’s Studies. Fourth, this journal provides the space for interdisciplinary, comparative/transnational studies of Global Africa/the African Diaspora and other women, families, and communities of color, using Black Women's Studies frameworks.”

11. "Berkeley Journal of Gender, Law & Justice, a continuation of the Berkeley Women’s Law Journal, is guided by an editorial policy which distinguishes us from other law reviews and feminist journals. Our mandate is to publish research, analysis, narrative, theory, and commentary that address the lives and struggles of underrepresented women. We believe that excellence in feminist legal scholarship requires critical examination of the intersection of gender with one or more other axes of subordination, including, but not limited to, race, class, sexual orientation, and disability. Therefore discussions that treat women as a monolithic group do not fall within our mandate. Because conditions of inequality are continually changing, our mandate is continually evolving.”

Each issue of this annual journal reflects the energies of this rapidly growing field by publishing essays, art exhibition and book reviews, bibliographies, and a forum on a current topic of interest to the study of early modern women. Essays may consider women and gender from any region of the globe and may develop a number of scholarly perspectives, including but not limited to art history, cultural studies, history, history of philosophy, history of science, literature, music, politics, religion, or theater. Approaches that challenge current assumptions and cross disciplinary boundaries are especially welcome.”

The editors are committed to providing a forum for feminist analysis, debate, and exchange. The feminist movement has demonstrated that the study of women is more than a compensatory project. Instead, feminism has the potential fundamentally to reshape the way we view the world. We wish not just to interpret women's experiences but to change women's condition. For us, feminist thought represents a transformation of consciousness, social forms, and modes of action.”

11. “Femspec, a peer-reviewed journal, is interested in developing a community of like-minded people engaged in speculating, theorizing, creating and questioning gender across the boundaries, including issues of sexual orientation. We emphasize interdisciplinary approaches, and encourage work on teaching as well as literary and cultural criticism and creative material. We hope an approach to pedagogy will bring in work from a wider area of disciplines. We are interested in a variety of feminisms and aim to be inclusive of ethnic and cultural diversity in an internationalist perspective. We are also committed to publishing feminist experimental prose and poetic works, and to experimenting across media. Our impetus came from the collectively-perceived lack of attention to non-linear writing, sf, fantasy, magical realism and supernatural works in feminist journals and audiences; the lack of consistently evolving developed levels of feminism in sf criticism; and the inadequacy of magical realism publishing outlets in the U.S.”

It is an international forum for research on and debates about feminist research on gender and language. Gender is defined broadly, as a key element of social relationships often loosely linked to perceived differences between the sexes as well as a primary arena for articulating power in complex interaction with other dimensions of power, like class, race, and sexuality. It welcomes research employing and investigating a range of different linguistic approaches (including, but not only including, conversation analysis, critical discourse analysis, ethnography of communication, interactional sociolinguistics, linguistic anthropology, variationist sociolinguistics, stylistics and pragmatics) which focus on a range of different linguistic phenomena."

and gender issues in the Middle East and the Islamic world.
These include Muslim and non-Muslim communities within the greater Middle East, and Muslim and Middle-Eastern communities elsewhere in the world. Articles dealing with men, masculinity, children and the family, or other issues of gender are also considered. The journal strives to include significant studies of theory and methodology as well as topical matter. Approximately one-third of the submissions focus on the pre-modern era, with the majority of articles focusing on the contemporary age. The journal features several full-length articles and current book reviews. The majority of Hawwa’s articles are in English. However, articles submitted in French are also considered.

9. “International Journal of Gender, Science and Technology (GST) is an open access, peer reviewed journal that welcomes contributions from practitioners, researchers and policy makers concerned with gender issues in and of science and technology, including engineering, construction and the built environment. Research in these areas is of interest not only to academics, but also to employers and educators involved in these sectors. We welcome contributions from a variety of disciplines and interdisciplinary perspectives and drawing on a wide range of theoretical frameworks. Our aim is to help foster and provide a focus for constructive debate and interchange of ideas between key players and experts in this field—promoting the sharing of knowledge and new understandings. GST enables those outside of academic institutions to have access to research data and results to inform strategies, responses and progress. Academic researchers will benefit from access to case studies and reports developed by practitioners and policy makers.”

11. "Persimmon Tree showcases an impressive variety of literature and art by women over 60, many still working well into their 80s and 90s. Many of the writers and artists are well-known: Marilyn French, Ruth Stone, Grace Paley, E. M. Broner, Paula Gunn Allen, Jane Lazarre, Faith Ringgold, and Nicole Hollandier. Others are lesser known, while some are newly developing their craft in their later years. All of them are at the height of their creative powers, and all of them express the shared, though diverse experiences of aging women, from late middle age to late old age. Persimmon Tree is intended to fill a niche that has been neglected by contemporary publishing, whether in print or online. There is a growing body of work by male writers and artists who are entering or well into old age. But the comparable body of work by aging women in much smaller and mostly limited to a few already well-known writers and artists. Women are creating, but they are not getting the exposure they deserve."

The aim of Reproductive Health Matters is "to promote laws, policies, research and services that meet women's reproductive health needs and support women's right to decide whether, when and how to have children... [its] women-centered perspective...allows us to identify and understand women's reproductive health needs, and therefore evaluate and improve on existing policy and practice to women's benefit.... To this end, the journal explores what is meant by women's needs and how these can best be met. It addresses fundamental values, concerns and dilemmas, acknowledging the multi-faceted nature of problems and solutions. Finally, it reflects on commonalities and differences in goals and points of view among those involved in the field – in order to foster increased communication and cooperation, new thinking and action, and new forms of consensus."

10. "Studies in Gender and Sexuality is a response to the excitement attendant to recent research and writing by scholars and clinicians. It provides a forum for examining gender and sexuality that is both multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary. As clinicians and scholars who have written and practiced at the intersection of feminist theory..."
and clinical psychoanalysis, the editors are especially interested in those areas of controversy that invite the divergent perspectives and insights of different disciplines. Early issues of SGS focus on transgender identities and intersexuality; contemporary readings of the category of perversion; puberty and adolescence revisited and revisited; and the intersections among class, race, and gender in theory, culture, and the clinical situation. The primary goal of SGS is to promote dialogue on these and other timely topics among clinicians, researchers, and theorists. Consonant with this goal, the journal also publishes related work from the humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences, where questions involving gender and sexuality are currently in lively debate.”

11. "Women and Therapy is the only professional journal that focuses entirely on the complex interrelationship between women and the therapeutic experience. The journal is devoted to descriptive, theoretical, clinical, empirical, and multicultural perspectives on the topic of women and therapy. Women comprise the overwhelming majority of clients in therapy. Yet there has been little emphasis on this area in the training of therapists or in the professional literature. Women & Therapy is designed to fill this void of information."
